START PROCEDURE

In order to ensure the flow of runners on the course, the start takes place in different starting blocks. Please line up according to your expected running time.

Which starting block is right for you?

<20min

You are in great shape and ambitious. You train several times a week and run the distance at a pace of under 4:30 min/km.

20-25min

You are sporty and run regularly. Your fitness level is great, and you want to go full throttle on the course.

25-30min

You are athletic and have running experience. Even if you don't run right at the front of the race, you are still pretty fast.

>30min

You are a beginner or occasional runner. Your focus is on the experience, the fun. The time is of secondary importance to you.

Walking

You are registered for the 'walking' category or are completing the distance walking.

TIMEKEEPING

We measure your running time with a timing chip, which is attached to your race number. As soon as you cross the start line, your timing starts automatically. Thanks to this system, it doesn't matter whether you cross the start line immediately after the starting shot or join the back of the queue and tackle the running course later.
